

Students of Chanakya National Law University will be providing free crash course for the students of 12th standard who want to pursue law and will be taking up the CLAT 2014 exams in the month of May, 2014. This crash course programme is a golden opportunity for the students who belong to the underprivileged section of society and are not able to prepare for CLAT due to monetary issues. The course will start in the second week of March in the campus of Chanakya National Law University, Mithapur, Patna. The interested students of 12th standard are requested to send an email on cnluidia@gmail.com

IDIA is being managed by the students of National Law University currently in 15 states. The basic objective of IDIA is to give an opportunity to those students who want to take up law as their career option but are facing money problem. The students of 12th standard whose parent's monthly income is below 20 thousand are eligible to apply for the test to be conducted to qualify for the crash course programme.

The Team Leader of CNLU IDIA Bihar chapter, Aditi Rani, informed us that the students who are willing to sit for the crash course will have to go through a test based on the same format of CLAT exam. After the test is conducted, the students who qualify in it will get admission in the crash course. The admitted students will be provided with free study material.
